Web sites you might find interesting

fredmiranda.com

People can upload their photos for comments and discussion by fellow photographers, who range from beginner to professional. The majority of members are from the US, but there are members from all over the world.

Timeanddate.com

This isn't a photographic site. There are calculators for various time and date events, one of which is for sunrise and sunsets anywhere in the world.

If you would like to photograph a sunrise but are not too keen on getting up at 4.00am to catch the 5.15am sunrise in the middle of June, maybe you might like to plan ahead for a mid October sunrise at 7.15am, or for your favourite winter vacation spot..

Your Input

If you have any tips, web sites or favourite photographic locations you would like to share, please email them to Phyllis Steele stainless@sympatico.ca.

Mentors Group Just a reminder.

We have a group of very knowledgeable photographers who are willing to answer your questions and work with you on a one to one basis. They are available at 8.30 am before each meeting, or you can contact them by telephone or email.

Photo Opportunity

This field of sunflowers is close to its peak right now (September 6th.) they should be good for a while yet. Best time to photograph them would be in the morning when hopefully the flowers will be facing you. In the photo below taken at 4.00pm in the afternoon they were all facing the other way. It is about a one hour drive from Kanata. Directions. Take 417 to Arnprior, turn left on White Lake Road, turn right on to Burnstown Road. The field is on the right, approximately 2 ½ km past Burnstown.
